Leonard St. John broke the dull spell at police headquarters this morning. When St. John poked his head through the Prospect street entrance to the station, there followed the first arrest in two weeks and the fifth since New Year's. The third heavy snowfall of the winter came last night and this morning. According to the measurements of Street Superintendent J. C. DeBrune, who had a large gang of men out clearing the streets and sidewalks early this morning, five inches of new snow lay on the ground at dawn. It continued to fall steadily throughout the forenoon and the beclouded skies pointed to a continuation. Lumbermen are rejoicing over the latest supply of what they call "business" snow. Recent high winds swept many a country road bare of snow and travel in all directions doubtless will be the better for the fall.
